This regiment was organized at Mansfield, in Aug. and Sept., 1862, to serve for three ye ars. It moved by rail to Covington, Ky., Sept. 4,

1862, and was engaged in the defense of that city against Gen. Kirby Smith. After about two weeks of duty it was sent to Louisville, Ky., participated in the defense of that city against Gen. Bragg, and joined in the pursuit of his army on Oct. 5, 1862. The regiment started for Nashville Sept. 21, 1863, where it remained about six month

On April 26, 1864, it was transferred to Tullahoma, Tenn. where it guarded the railroad from Normandy to Decherd until June 6. It then moved across the Cumberland mountains to Bellefonte, Ala., arriving on June 10, and continued its march to Dodsonville, where it was employed on the defense of the Tennessee river from Stevenson to the foot of Seven-mile island, a distance of 50 miles. During the summer the regiment had frequent engagements with the enemy. On Sept. 23 about 400 men of the regiment were ordered to reinforce the fort at Athens, Ala., and on the 24th lost a large number of men killed and wounded, the remainder being captured and sent to Cahaba prison. After being paroled the prisoners were placed on board the ill-fated steamer Sultana, and as near as can be ascertained 70 perished in that disaster. The regiment was engaged at the siege of Decatur, Ala., Oct. 26-29, 1864. After the siege it was frequently engaged in sharp and severe skirmishes with the enemy until mustered out at Nashville, Tenn., June 30, 1865, in accordance with orders from the war department.

Notes for Charles Decateur Buker Shirer:

Charles was born two years before Sara married Howard Shirer. It is rumored that Charles father was the Charles Buker shown living with the family in the 1870 census. At the time of Charles birth, Sarah was 20 and Charles was 15. It is doubtful he is the father. Since Charles Decatur Shirer has the middle name of Decatur, it is probably in reference to Decatur Buker. If he was Charles' grandfather then the most likely person to be Charles' father is Decatur's son, Charles W. Buker. He was 23 at that time and close in age to Sarah. He did not marry until 8 years later to a woman 10 years his junior. It should also be noted that Charles W. Buker was a carpenter and may have worked for the Shirers. Howard was a carpenter and carried on the family business. Charles may have worked for him and been able to help support and look after his son. Also of note is the fact that Decatur Buker's brother Alpha, was the owner of the Hotel before Sarah's father Joseph bought it. The Charles Buker in the 1870 census being 9 years old may be the son of Alpha. (This information supplied from The Shirer Family Genealogy Project located at:
